

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON DIES IN WILD FOU

Called Foremost Recent American Poet

NEW YORK, April 6 (A. P.)—Edwin Arlington Robinson, three times winner of the Pulitzer prize and honored as "America's foremost living poet," died early today.

He was born in Head Tide, Me., Dec. 22, 1869. His family moved to Gardner, in the same State, where he was a lawyer. Graduated at Harvard in 1891 and then worked in an office in Boston.

He attended public schools and went to Harvard University for two years. The influence of his father and the name of the father and the name of the father and the name of the father.

He held various jobs in New York City. One he worked in the Customs office. He was a subway inspector. All the time he wrote and the dream life was poetry.

Recognition came to him slowly but when it did come he was enthusiastically acclaimed by critics and readers.

In 1923 the University awarded Robinson the degree of doctor of letters as the "foremost living poet."

He was a poet for poetry, his art being more than a study. Amy Lowell called him "the 'Tilly' of poetry."

At the turn of the century he lived in a Chelsea rooming house, working as a bookkeeper in the First New York subway. One day he was suggested to read an editorial for a magazine.

Every summer he went to the McDowell Colony at Farmington, N. H. He revealed the gift needed by the American poet in the 19th century.

Speeding Car Hits Fire A By Somerville 0

Following a four-mile chase at the rate of 60 miles an hour from Somerville to Cambridge, the driver of a Cambridge young man in the latter city after the speeding car, then knocked over a fire alarm box at Broadway and Elyria in Cambridge.

The man, who arrested the car, was identified as Edward J. Campbell, 24, of 143 Thayer street in Cambridge. Both were taken up at Somerville Police Station and held until 10 o'clock.

The chase began near Edward Wilbur street in Somerville. Patrolmen Cameron and Leo Heardon of Somerville were proceeding along Elm street when they saw the car.

The car with the two men in it, the police signaled them to stop, but they kept going. The police chased the car into Webster street and crossed it across the Somerville boundary line.

months in London twice since. That's about all.

The athletic appearance of a poet, the appearance of a poet, the appearance of a poet.

Robinson accepted things as they were in contrast to Mark Twain, who spoke in bitterness of the "damned human race."

The list of his published books follows: "The Poet and the Poem," 1907; "The Poet and the Poem," 1907; "The Poet and the Poem," 1907.
