AP US History Curriculum

Course Description

AP US History is a course designed to give the advanced high school student the opportunity to experience a college-level curriculum. Students will read and analyze texts and primary sources to gain a sophisticated level of understanding of the events, people, and issues that have shaped American history. While examining the historiography of the content of our course students will be doing their own extensive evaluation and essay writing to develop their own personal understanding of US history. To do this, students must discover their own ideas and opinions while accepting the existence of and learning how to work with opposing viewpoints. Students will be challenged to ask questions, take sides, and defend their positions both in writing and during class discussions.

Writing Assignments: Emphasized Themes:	FRQ: When South Carolina threatened to secede from the Union in 1832 because of an excessively high tariff, President Andrew Jackson responded with threats of federal military intervention. The crisis passed when state officials acquiesced and talk of withdrawing from the United States abated. Abraham Lincoln, wishing to avoid direct military conflict between state and federal forces took no initial aggressive action to keep Southern states from seceding in 1860. If Lincoln followed Jackson approach to dealing with the issue of secession could the Civil War have been averted? FRQ : The secession of the South in 1860 was based on the region's long-standing belief in states' rights. Seceding states argued that the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions clearly noted that the federal government was given its authority by the states. Therefore, that authority could be withdrawn when the best interest of the state was jeopardized by the federal government. The South concluded this meant that the states had the right to withdraw from the Union. Agree or disagree with the South's position. Background

The United States went through remarkable changes during the period of 1875-1915 as it reunited its northern and southern states and expanded its industry, trading, and migration of peoples both at home and abroad. One of the most interesting periods of our history, this era of rapid industrialization and immigration largely contributed to the development of the business and industrial giant that is the United States today.

Task

Your job is to research the human experience of newly-arrived immigrants who lived and worked in the United States during this time period. After developing a working knowledge of what it might have been like to live during this era, you will write a diary from the point of view of one of these people. While documenting the daily life of this individual, you will include descriptions of their cultural background, occupation, and personal views and opinions of the political and social issues occurring in the US.

Criteria and Format

During your initial research, you will need to locate a total of 6 sources including:

- > at least 1 source found on the Internet
- > at least 1 periodical, such as a magazine or newspaper article
- > at least 1 primary source, such as a diary, journal, or autobiography

You will type a two-page summary and analysis of the information located while completing your initial research and include a properly-formatted works cited page. Each of the six sources you located must be cited at least once in this summary.

The diary must contain at least six entries, each of which is at least one hand-written page in length. Each entry must have a date (including the year), a signature, and a minimum of two parenthetical references. The diary must also contain a title page and an introduction describing who your character is, including his or her name, age, gender, where he or she lives, his or her cultural heritage, the economic situation of his or her family, and his or her present occupation.

The diary must contain "authentic" visuals (accurate to the time period and character's educational and economic status) showing where your character lived, a picture of the home, a map of the location of his or her home in the state and in the country (United States), and picture(s) of the character. The diary must also be hand-written and look "authentic" but NO BURNED EDGES PLEASE!.

You will present your diary to a small group in class using at least one colorful, creative, eyecatching poster that is easily seen from at least 20 feet away that includes a sketch or picture of the type of dress the person wore and at least one journal entry. You will tell about your research, discuss an analysis of the events, and read at least two journal entries. You will be required to wear formal dress for the presentation.
